

Escape to Kiawah Island Golf Resort to Celebrate the Festive Season

Kiawah Island, SC, September 25, 2020 – With much long-distance travel suspended, Kiawah Island Golf Resort is an ideal alternative located close to home yet feeling worlds away. While the resort is widely sought for summer beach vacations and fall and spring golf, the festive season is an equally enchanting time to visit. The island provides close proximity for guests living within driving distance or near one of the numerous cities offering direct flights to Charleston International Airport (CHS). Here families can leave their passports at home and embark upon a holiday vacation.

Feasting with loved ones is at the heart of the festive season. Guests will appreciate all the fun and none of the fuss by leaving the planning and preparations to Kiawah Island Golf Resort's culinary team, whether dining at one of the resort's more than a dozen restaurants or savoring a catered meal together with those most important to them in the privacy of their lodging.

From stunning sunset to sundown, with its subtropical climate Kiawah Island invites guests to relish its breathtaking landscape. Whether pursuing abundant outdoor recreational and nature activities, or simply strolling the ten miles of pristine beach, or biking on 30 miles of paved bike trails beneath a tunnel of twisting live oak branches and whispering palms, guests will encounter inexhaustible opportunities to commune with the island's remarkably preserved environment.

All five of the resort's championship golf courses remain open throughout the winter, including The Ocean Course, host of the 2021 PGA Championship. The internationally top-ranked Roy Barth Tennis Center provides ample court time, lessons and clinics on its 22 courts.

Shoppers will enjoy perusing the Sanctuary retail wing or one of the resort's five pro shops for boutique clothing, resort-themed casualwear, housewares, golf equipment or even an original piece of artwork.

Accommodations range from the luxurious Forbes Five Star/AAA Five Diamond Sanctuary hotel to Resort Villas and Homes accommodating up to 18 guests. Such diverse lodging options make the resort the perfect winter destination for families of all sizes.
